Alas, the figures in our Introduction were not printed in color as intended. Also, Figure 4 showed our redrawn copy of Playfair’s original rather than the version which we had obtained from the Library of Congress. The correct figures and their captions are shown below.

Ian Spence and Howard Wainer

Figure 1. Plate 4 (1st, 2nd, and 3rd eds.) showing trade with the West Indies. We have matched the scales of the plates to allow a direct comparison of the curves. This has the consequence of producing a slightly distorted third edition plate which is wider than the original. The central panel was constructed using the data from Table IV in the first edition and is discrepant from the curves in the third edition.
Figure 2. Plate 17 (3rd ed.) and Plate 22 (1st and 2nd eds.) showing trade with the Jersey, Guernsey, and Alderney. This plate is numbered 16 in the index to the third edition. We have matched the scales of the plates to allow a direct comparison of the curves. The central panel was constructed using the data from Table IV in the first edition. Playfair’s curves exhibit seven crossings whereas our curves cross only three times.
Figure 3. Plate 5 (3rd ed.) showing trade with North America. These two versions of the same plate are reproduced from different copies of the book. Differences in quality and quantity of the hand staining are noticeable. A common engraving error in the line of imports is seen at the extreme right, with the hand-stained yellow-orange line indicating the correct branch.
